

Contract of liability regarding the use of Jönköping University's computer, network and system resources

You are personally responsible for your account and its use. Your personal details will be stored in the University's internal systems. Your account will be deleted when the period of validity has expired.

You agree to the terms and conditions of this contract of liability as of when you begin using the account.

Regulations

The account is to be used for University-related purposes. The account is a personal one and account details such as the password should be kept secret. Use of the account should be in compliance with Swedish legislation and generally accepted ethical rules.

By using Jönköping University's computer, network and system resources, you agree to comply with SUNET's (Swedish University Computer Network) ethical rules. SUNET's primary aim is to provide Swedish universities and colleges with access to national and international data communication.

SUNET considers it unethical when a user:

- Tries to access network resources or other IT resources without having the right to do that
- Attempts to interfere with or disrupt the intended use of the networks or connected IT resources
- Attempts to damage or destroy computer-based information
- Clearly misuses available resources (personnel, hardware, software)
- Infringes on personal privacy
- Tries to insult or offend others

Examples of unethical conduct include the illegal distribution of copyright-protected material or installation of software

Penalties

Any breach of this contract of liability will result in the account being deactivated immediately and the incident followed up.
