

JÖNKÖPING UNIVERSITY
School of Health and Welfare

Dear Student,

Welcome to the School of Health and Welfare, Jönköping University.

The education at the School of Health and Welfare is conducted in a flexible and inter-professional environment, where simulation and digital techniques are combined with theoretical education by specialists.

Our education and research are performed in close collaboration with the surrounding society to ensure an attractive and high-quality education. Societal benefit is the hallmark of the School of Health and Welfare to support long-term sustainable health, welfare, and care. To accomplish this, our international collaborations are of great value and benefit.

The School of Health and Welfare offers undergraduate programmes within Social Work, Occupational Therapy, Prosthetics and Orthotics, Nursing, Biomedical Laboratory Science (focusing Laboratory Medicine and Clinical Physiology), Diagnostic Radiology Nursing, Dental Hygiene as well as separate courses in Gerontology. At the advanced level, we have eight master programmes within our different academic fields, for example Master of Product Development – Specialisation in Assistive Technology and Master Programme on Quality Improvement and Leadership in Health and Welfare. We also have a broad framework of commissioned educations with participants from all over the world.

The education at School of Health and Welfare aims to integrate and deepen students' theoretical and practical knowledge. To enable students to practice and develop their skills, the School of Health and Welfare has several simulation labs.

The research is divided in eight academic areas with researchers from different specialities and professional backgrounds. The research has a broad approach to theories, methods and knowledge from different areas within the field of humanities and social sciences. The School of Health and Welfare also runs a Research School of Health and Welfare (RSHW). With over 60 PhD students enrolled in three different doctoral programs, RSHW is a place fostering new ideas and stimulating creation of knowledge that meets tomorrow's challenges in health care and social welfare.

Our campus offers an outstanding array of events, activities, organizations and extracurricular programmes in which you can become involved!

Once again, welcome to the School of Health and Welfare
