Advice from an International Student

Stay in contact

Your friends and family will be keen to hear you have arrived safely and all about your exciting adventures whilst you are away. You should give them emergency contact numbers and keep them regularly informed of your movements while overseas. You may even want to keep a personal diary to keep track of all the exciting and strange occurrences during your stay and to write about all interesting people you have met. This is a great way to look back on all the amazing things that will happen to you while you are here.

Personal health and safety

Keep in mind that you may be living in a different environment from which you are used to at home. Take a common sense approach and behave sensibly.

Prepare well in advance and purchase any prescription drugs you may need in the time you are away from home. If you are taking medication on a regular basis, consult your doctor about taking adequate medication for your time overseas. If your medication is perishable in the time you are away please research that the medication is widely available in Sweden.

Monitor your health. Traveling into a foreign environment brings your body in contact with different bacteria that in themselves may not be harmful but may give you a cold or upset stomach. People who live locally in an environment may be immune to these local bacteria that you may have yet to come into contact with, also take into account your long flight here and the excitement of a new country may make you ill. Do not run yourself into the ground trying to do and see everything. Moderation pays off in the long run.

Eat well. Eating a well balanced diet will reduce the chances of becoming sick and therefore allow you to make the best use of your time whilst in Jönköping.

Life overseas

Life overseas, especially for the first time can be exciting and at times stressful. You may experience culture shock. This is a result from coming across many new things, customs and different understandings about the world. These changes may create uncertainty and confusion about how you are as a person, how you fit in and how you feel about yourself, Therefore it is important to consider your own motivations for going abroad. This could be improving you English or Swedish, an adventure or to get in touch with your cultural heritage. These motivations you may want to consider how you anticipate interacting with people you meet in Jönköping as how you act will give other people an impression of how all people may be in your own country, as you are an ambassador.

Managing culture shock

A sense of humor is necessary for working in cross-cultural environments. By laughing at yourself and being able to see the humor in these situations you will have an easier time adjusting. You should even have some humorous stories to tell your friends and family.
